Emotions drive learning, decision making, creativity, relationships, and health. The Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence uses the power of emotions to create a healthier, and more equitable, productive, and compassionate society, today and for future generations.

The Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence conducts research and designs educational approaches that support people of all ages in developing emotional intelligence and the skills to thrive and contribute to society.

This training will focus on how the tenets of emotional intelligence can be incorporated into after school programming to provide additional learning and skill building opportunities for our youth.

Presenter:
Marc Brackett, Ph.D.
Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence

Marc Brackett, Ph.D., is Director of the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence, and Professor in the Child Study Center at Yale University. His grant-funded research focuses on the role of emotional intelligence in learning, decision making, relationship quality, well-being, performance, and organizational climate. Marc regularly consults with school systems, and for the last four years has worked with Facebook to develop tools that help adults and children develop emotional intelligence and resolve online conflict.
