For schools to provide the quality education children deserve, families, schools, and communities must be involved as purposeful partners in the education process. This half-day workshop is designed for after school program staff who work with students in grades 3-6.

During this workshop, participants will:

- ◆ Learn fraction based activities to engage students in learning content related to school day learning and grade level standards;
- ◆ Learn how to translate content area focus into practical use for after school, including a “make and take” session to walk away with materials to use in their programs; and
- ◆ Work with presenters to develop work plans that align with program and school objectives and help build a toolkit for work with fractions that engage students in hands on learning.
